

modes of instruction

PARKLAND COLLEGE | fall 2021

At Parkland College, we are committed to your safety, your access to educational opportunities, and your academic success. This academic year, the college will offer several different modes of instruction to better accommodate our students during the pandemic.

Opportunities for On-Campus Instruction

Hybrid sections (H) have some meeting time on campus and some work online. Attendance at the on-campus sessions is expected. On-campus sessions will be in small groups with social distancing.

Flexible sections (F) allow students to choose to come to campus, stay home and watch a live stream, or watch the recorded class before the next course session.

Opportunities for Online Instruction

Online sections (W) are totally online. Students can typically choose the time of day they work on the course. Faculty interact with students through online office hours, chats, discussion posts, and email.

Online synchronous sections (V) are fully online but with synchronous, scheduled, real-time lectures and interaction with faculty. Students will be expected to meet online with their instructor and classmates on scheduled dates.

Online options will still offer opportunities to interact with faculty and classmates.

Sections with a "T" notation require that students bring their own laptop. Computers will not be provided but are needed during the class period.*

If needed, due to social distancing requirements enacted by the State of Illinois and/or federal agencies, classes will transition to fully online.*

If all classes move to fully online, students will need a minimum of a computer, webcam, and reliable internet.*