

COMMUNICATION: MEDIA PRODUCTION

Program Code: F.MPR.CER

Certificate

Graduation requirement — 18 semester hours

Students interested in enhancing their production skills in media, music, computers, and the arts will find that this certificate prepares them for entry-level positions that require in-depth knowledge of mass communication production techniques and software. Students will gain practical production experience in radio, television, sports, music, film, and digital media. Graduates are employed as production assistants at radio or television stations or companies with business interests in gaming, music, film, or other entertainment industry fields. Students should plan their certificate program with a Communication faculty advisor.

For more information, see parkland.edu/communication.

Program Note

Production graduates are expected to have broadcast writing and broadcast announcing skills. Students who cannot meet these criteria will be advised to enroll in COM 106 or COM 140.
